Call for Papers

Second BRISE Conference on Early Childhood Development
Berlin, Germany, November 5–6, 2020

Following her stimulating inaugural BRISE Conference on Early Childhood Development last fall, the Bremen Initiative to Foster Early Childhood Development (BRISE) is happy to announce the Second BRISE Conference on Early Childhood Development to be held at the Leibniz Headquarters in Berlin, Germany on November 5–6, 2020. The BRISE conferences are single-session and strive to spark lively debate on current research improving our understanding of how children’s cognitive, social, and emotional abilities develop and how caregivers might foster their development, especially in children from disadvantaged families. Two keynote speakers will contribute their wealth of experience on factors impacting the life chances of children: Yvonne Anders—also a member of the BRISE research alliance—and Greg J. Duncan will surely each provide much food for thought and discussion.

Submissions from academics of all career stages are now being accepted for paper or poster presentations in both German and English. We welcome submissions from all disciplines engaged in research on early childhood development.

Researchers interested in actively contributing to the meeting are invited to submit a 250 word summary of their proposed presentation via email to brise@leibniz-ipn.de by June 15, 2020. The summaries of accepted papers will be made available online.

There will be no registration fee, but we ask all participants to register online for the meeting. We will provide the specific link and more details about the registration process in the near future. Please feel free to contact us via the given email address with any questions you might have and to distribute this open call for submissions to your networks.

We look forward to seeing you in Berlin.

On behalf of the BRISE research alliance

Olaf Köller